Volume XLVI, Number 5, May 2024

Welcome to the New WVGS Newsletter

Your Newsletter is coming to you with a new face and a strong mission to help you in your quest for your family history. Here you will find opportunities to increase your knowledge and skills, stories of your fellow members as they search for their ancestors, ways we can work together for our shared progress, and some bits to help keep the newsletter fun. We hope you will enjoy it!

What Members Said: A Report on Our Newsletter Survey

A big Thank You goes to all the members who responded to the recent survey about our newsletter. The greatest single message from respondents is that they want information that will help them in their own family history research. Below are some specifics.

A whopping 89% want research tips. Thus there is a newsletter column for Research Tips. 82% want opportunities for more learning, so there is a column of Opportunities 4U. (There are also additional articles in this newsletter about opportunities, such as the WVGS Scholarship Program and the WVGS Member Mutual Assistance Program.) 79% want to read about the research journeys of other members, so there is a column for Member Profiles. 75% want news of their fellow members' present genealogy activities, so there is a column for Member News. 75% want to know about new books available, so there is a column of Books Added. A majority of members also liked the other ideas offered in the survey but without apparent enthusiasm. 28% of our members offered additional ideas. (Thank you!) Almost all of those additional ideas are about learning to be more effective researchers and writers. We hope this first edition of the new Newsletter will fulfill some of your wishes!

This newsletter is sent by postal mail to members who do not use email. When an article invites members to respond by email, members can instead respond by writing to this address:

Opportunities 4U

Three locations in Salem offer volunteer advice and free access to “premium” (paid) online databases. One is Salem Public Library and our WVGS help desk. The other two are LDS FamilySearch Centers. They welcome all researchers whether LDS members or not.

One FamilySearch Center is at 4550 Lone Oak Rd SE, phone \(503\) 569-3097. Its hours are Tuesdays and Thursdays 6:00 to 9:00 pm and Wednesdays 10 am to 1:00 pm. It provides over a dozen computer workstations. Access is by a door in the rear of the building. If the door is locked, just knock. See below for its online offerings. Photos are on other pages.

The other FamilySearch Center is at 862 45th Ave NE, phone \(503\) 884-9302. Its hours are Tuesdays 12:30 to 4:00, Wednesdays 1:00 to 8:00, Thursdays 9:00 to Noon, and the second and fourth Saturdays of each month from 9:00 to Noon. It provides a few workstations and, by the way, has a new high-tech photo scanner.

The online resources available at FamilySearch Centers include (with predominant usage in parentheses) Ancestry Institution (sites in several countries), Findmypast (UK), Geneanet (several European countries), Puzzilla (research opportunities), 19th Century British Library Newspapers (searchable database), Alexander Street (social and cultural history), American Ancestors (New England and other renowned resources), ArkivDigital (Swedish records), FamNet (New Zealand roots), Fold3 (military), Goldie May (software tools), Irish Ancestors, MyHeritage Library Edition (databases and more), Newspaper Archive, and Paper Trail (westward migration). You can review these resources online for further descriptions.

When seeking help from a volunteer, remember every volunteer is different with different areas of experience and expertise. Your question that cannot be answered by one volunteer might be thoroughly answered by a volunteer on the next shift. Keep trying. Ask around.

If you are one of our members who lives far from Salem, there are FamilySearch Centers throughout the United States (and beyond). Apparently, all the Centers in the United States have the same research tools as listed above for the Salem Centers.

Ask Jeanie

Dear Jeanie,

What can I do about my husband? He lives in front of the computer looking up his dead relatives. They never even sent us Christmas cards. He doesn't even do yardwork anymore. And he's starting to smell bad. Help! Signed, Desperate

Dear Desperate,

Your husband is suffering from Geneyosis. He needs to join a genealogist recovery program similar to Alcoholics Anonymous. There is a local recovery chapter in Salem called the Willamette Valley Genealogy Society. It might not cure him, but by taking him to meetings you can at least air him out once a month. Signed, Jeanie

Have a question for Jeanie? Send her an email with the word Newsletter in the subject line to willvgs@yahoo.com.

Member Mutual Aid

As you know, genealogical research is a gigantic field of endeavor. WVGS has about a hundred members, and each of us knows a little or a lot about that huge field. The question for many members is how we can share our knowledge for each other's benefit.

If you would like help from another member, send a message with Newsletter in the subject line to willvgs@yahoo.com. State what kind of help you would like. Newsletter space is limited so please be succinct. Your question, perhaps edited, will appear in the next newsletter. Your name will not be published. If someone can help, we will arrange contact between you.

Here are some member requests. Can you help a fellow member?

Dear WVGS: Can someone translate a German birth record from the 1850s for me?

Dear WVGS: I am descended from Huguenots. Are there other members who are descended from Huguenots and who would like to get together to share our knowledge?

Dear WVGS: I have done a lot of research about my family, and I want to begin writing what I have discovered. I don't know how to organize all this information. How has someone else done it? Maybe I could do mine like theirs or get some ideas.

Dear WVGS: Is someone proficient at MS Publisher? The newsletter editor needs a lesson!

If you can help with any of these, or if you would like to ask for some help from other members, send an email with Newsletter in the subject line to willvgs@yahoo.com.

Scholarships Available for You

WVGS is budgeted to offer up to four scholarships per year for members to take genealogy courses online. This means you. A course usually lasts six weeks with homework and assignments each week. Do you want to take a course to become very knowledgeable in some aspect of genealogy important to your work?

The trade-off is simply that you will need to offer a program of some kind at a WVGS meeting to share with the rest of the membership some of what you learned. If you want help preparing or presenting a program, an experienced member will be happy to help. If you are inexperienced or afraid to give a presentation, that alone is a good reason to do this. Go for it!

Research Tips

As you know, not long ago in genealogical time, writers (“scribes”) wrote people’s names and other information into official record books based on what the scribe heard when the informant spoke. Thus, a person might have his name spelled several different ways in the same community record books depending on what each scribe heard each time the name was being spoken for the record.

There is a way to make an educated guess at other possible spellings by understanding that certain pairs of sounds are identical except that one is “voiced” while the other is “unvoiced.” Especially if an informant did not enunciate clearly, a scribe could easily miss the difference between the voiced and unvoiced sounds. In brief, a voiced sound uses the vocal cords, but an unvoiced sound is made of air passing through the “voice box” without the activation of vocal cords. A sigh is not voiced; a groan is voiced. In effect, we turn on or off our voice boxes to make the sound we want. Try making some of these sounds out loud.

Five pairs of sounds are often involved in variant spellings. They are the pairs P/B, T/D, K/G, F/V, and S/Z. The first letter in each of those pairs is unvoiced, and the second in each set is voiced. When you say the first and then the second, you can hear and feel the difference. Notice that we hold our mouths in exactly the same position for both sounds in each pair. Our jaws and tongue do not change. The only difference is that we don’t use our voice box for the first sound in each pair, and we use it for the second sound in the pair.

Thus, holding our mouths exactly the same, Pen becomes Ben if we voice the first sound. Battle becomes Baddle or Taddle. Genter can become Kender. Volter may turn into Folder or maybe Volder, and so forth. Therefore, if you can’t find the name you are looking for, especially when you know it should be there in the text or index you are searching, try out some of those five voiced/unvoiced pairs to discover what other spellings might be at work in the records. Ask yourself, “What might the scribe have heard?”

Member News

WVGS wishes first and foremost to recognize and thank Elizabeth “Liz” Tice, who is stepping down as editor of this Newsletter after almost twenty years! She became Newsletter editor in 2005! The amount of work and care Liz has put into this monthly publication is beyond imagination, and WVGS is in her debt. At the same time, Liz has served as WVGS president for many years, as course instructor, library volunteer, and in many other capacities. She continues in many of those projects and is the WVGS recording secretary. Thanks, Liz, for your dedication!

Craig and Deanne Smith will be taking their massive abilities to Monmouth Public Library to provide genealogy research assistance for MPL patrons. They will assist Liz Tice with a workshop in May and then volunteer there twice per month to help MPL patrons with their genealogical research. Their careers in leadership at the Oregon State Library have been our gain as they apply their skills to our WVGS library and WVGS help desk at Salem Public Library. Now MPL can also benefit.

Tony Hoff has achieved a tremendous breakthrough in his genealogical research. Tony is a highly experienced researcher and had long sought a birth record for his paternal German grandfather. Without it he could not find his great-grandfather’s name. Then he found a marriage record for his grandfather’s German mother but just across the border in Belgium. In that marriage record, the newlyweds also officially recognized in full detail their son, who had been born a year earlier. That constituted the missing birth record and provided the father’s information. Tony achieved this with a French translation by another member. Let’s help each other.

David Bruey will present a program via Zoom for the Clark County, Washington, Genealogical Society on May 28th at 7:00 PM. The program is titled “Writing Your Own Family History.” David developed this presentation at the request of Genealogical Forum of Oregon for its Open House in 2023 based on his book The Ancestry of Amelia Marilla Morley. Since then he has presented it three times, so he might get it right this time. If you want to attend this free Zoom program, send an email with Newsletter in the subject line to willvgs@yahoo.com.

Do you have a recent or upcoming accomplishment in your genealogy life? Please tell us about it! Email your news with Newsletter in the subject line to willvgs@yahoo.com. Thanks!

Member Profile

Our Member Profile for May presents Sally Broadwater. Sally's journey into her family history began in Portland about 1971. A friend whose family had joined the LDS Church didn't want to work on family genealogy alone. She asked Sally to work with her. They had families and jobs so their progress was slow, but they kept at it.

That friend's request for help launched a lifelong adventure for Sally in both research and family relationships. When Sally moved to Salem about 1978, she met Addie Dyal, married name Rickey, who was a member of WVGS and very active in genealogy. Sally credits Addie with extensive help and with inspiring her to really dig into family history.

Sally Broadwater

Not only did Sally's research bring together ancestors as far back as the Jamestown Colony. She also cultivated an extended family network of genealogy buffs across the United States. Among them was her mother in southern Oregon who, once hooked, kept sending Sally scraps of paper bearing little genealogy notes. Sally has visited and remained in contact with several younger cousins in south Texas who took up genealogy. Her travels took her to visit a cousin in Virginia who developed the knowledge of her Harris ancestral line in Jamestown. When Sally visited Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, and Tennessee, relatives in those areas became involved in cemetery visits. Sally's research projects also took her to Missouri and to Oklahoma where her ancestors lived when it was still "Indian Territory."

Her ancestors in Oklahoma Territory in the 1850s have been a proverbial "brick wall" for Sally. Her target surname of Smith in that time and place would be any genealogist's nightmare. On top of that, two Broadwater brothers there each had sons named Charles, which was the target ancestor's first name. Which of the two Charles Broadwaters to follow back in time remains a mystery. Speaking of mysteries, Sally's research disclosed an amazingly long parallel history. Sally's Smith ancestors and her husband's Broadwater ancestors were both living in Oklahoma Territory. Their ancestors had also lived near each other in Virginia, and later they lived near each other and even attended the same church in Roseburg, Oregon.

Sally is still active in family history and in WVGS, but her younger cousins are taking over research on most of the ancestral lines. While Sally is still interested in her Smith and Harris lines and her husband's Broadwater and Culler lines, much of that work is moving to a niece. Sally is confident that the research on their family history will continue, and she hopes the extended family research network will continue to bind the distant cousins together.
